MODESTY.

When every pool in Eden was a mirror,
That unto Eve her dainty charms proclaimed,
Single fear or
Thought that she had need to be ashamed.

'Twas only when she'd eaten of the apple
That she became inclined to be a prude
And found that ever more she'd have to grapple
With the much-debated problem of the nude.

Thereafter she devoted her attention
Her time and all her money to her clothes,
And that was the beginning of convention,
And modesty, as well, I suppose.

Reaction's come about in fashions, recent
Now girls conceal so little from the men,
It would seem in the name of all that's decent.

Some one ought to pass the apples
—Frank Simpson, Huntington, W. Va.

WARNING TO PRODUCERS

Against Planting Seed of Inferior Varieties of Cotton.

Washington, D. C., March 9.—The Department of Agriculture, on April 9, 1914, and again on March 2, 1915, issued warnings to farmers of the southwest against planting varieties of cotton that usually produce a staple of less than 7-8 inch in length, especially such varieties as are said to produce half and half lint. In view of the approaching planting season, the department wishes to reiterate these warnings for the benefit of the entire cotton belt. The producers of cotton, for their own welfare, should heed this advice and should exercise judicious care in the selection of planting seed.

The following reasons are given for warning cotton growers against planting any variety that usually produces a staple of less than seven-eighths inch in length:

1. Cotton of less than seven-eighths inch staple is of approximately the same spinning value as the bulk of the cotton of India. On economic principles, the American product should be maintained on a higher level of intrinsic worth than that of India in order that the American crop may not be forced to compete in the markets of the world with the cotton of India.

2. Cotton of less than seven-eighths inch staple is inferior to the average American quality, and localities that produce such cotton in appreciable quantities soon establish reputations for an inferior product. The price of all cotton in such market will suffer on account of the poor reputation of the market.

3. Competent cotton buyers discriminate against extremely short staple whenever such cotton is discovered. They should be equally careful to discriminate in favor of cotton with good staple. The farmer who produces inferior cotton is likely to find that his product brings a price materially lower than quotations would indicate as its true value. The seller commonly looks upon such discrimination as a penalty, while the buyer considers that he is paying full value for an inferior commodity.

4. Under the common practice of the cotton trade, the price of spot cotton is governed largely by future quotations. In order that the future quotations might more accurately reflect the value of spot cotton, congress in the United States Cotton Futures Act, provided a form of contract, exempt from the tax imposed by the act, on which cotton of extremely low grade or which is less than seven-eighths inch in length of staple is not deliverable. This action by congress was intended primarily for the benefit of producers. One of its results was the adoption by the New York and New Orleans Exchanges of the exempted form of 'future contract, so that cotton of less than seven-eighths inch in length of staple cannot be delivered thereon. This regulation in no way affects any sale of spot cotton.

5. As the variety of seed planted is the primary factor in determining the length of staple, and as there are early maturing, prolific varieties which produce a staple of at least an inch in length, no farmer or community is justified in planting an inferior variety, or expecting the full market price for a debased article of commerce.

PHYSICAL BASIS IN GIRL BUILDING

Every thinking person will heartily endorse the purpose of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs to establish "trade schools" for girls. And the endorsement will be given, because of the physical, as well as the moral, basis as pursued in these schools. The argument rests on sound psychological analysis and moral conviction. The credentials are from a higher court than that of the utilities; though in our day practicalities are of vast interest.

Thoughtful educators are pressing the point of the physical and moral basis of education and culture.

All Scripture unites in the truth that physical soundness is the essential of all essentials. The conclusion is that a weak physical nature means an unhealthy mind, morally so. These club women propose to teach and show the girls that a fine physical development is the greatest gift she can covet, that health is a complement to moral and spiritual life, that if she would keep something of natural music in her, something of native freshness and elasticity of body and mind to a late hour in life, she must give all the care she can to the things of physical culture. Not in any haphazard way, but uniform, systematized and persevered in culture.

To teach her to garner and conserve physical strength energy and a joyous spirit; facilities that will help her in winning other prizes, make her a charming companion, and leave no room in the kingdom within her for morbid sentiment and morbid hysteria. The purpose of these clubwomen, who have time, money and disposition to be of service to their less fortunate sisters, is worthy of praise.—Johnson City Staff.

A CASE OF NEWSPAPER ASSAULT AND BATTERY.

We saw in the daily press of last Saturday a news item which purported to come from Chicago and which represented "Prof. Fitzgerald S. Parker," "Bishop Collins D. Denny of Nashville" and Prof. Wilbur F. Tillett of Vanderbilt University as "championing" so "worthy a thing as dancing."

It is true that this charge is modified in a succeeding paragraph to that of a simple objection on the part of the Church, South, in its discipline. But the main object of the writer of the news item was accomplished, since the public fastened and feasted on the former charge.

We happened to attend that conference and to hear these speakers. All that they did was to uphold the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in its time-honored policy of not cataloguing the specified sins to which human nature is subject and which are emphatically condemned by the Church.

We hardly think that our readers were startled by the dispatch in question. It was the same in effect that was circulated in many newspapers during the last General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, when an effort was made to abolish the specific mention, without removing the condemnation of worldly amusements.

That the newspaper man who fathered the false report of last Saturday when he thought that he was serving up something new and spicy would indicate that he was suffering not so much from a bad heart as from a soft head. Chicago should not feel proud of such news service.—Christian Advocate.

Breaking It Gently.

The young man was palpably nervous. "Er-er, Gwendolyn," he said, hesitatingly, "er-er—there is something that has been troubling me on my lips for the last few weeks." "Yes, I have noticed it," replied the cold-hearted fair one, "and I've wondered why you didn't shave it off." And out in the darkness a katy-did chirped and a bullfrog croaked sadly to the unresponsive moon.—Exchange.

CHEERFULNESS HELPS A MAN TO SUCCEED.

"The men whom I have seen succeed best in life," says Charles Kingsley, "have always been cheerful and hopeful men, who went about their business with smiles on their faces, and took the changes and chances of this mortal life as it came." And I believe Kingsley's observation accords with the general rule. The worrying, anxious, fussy, or sour fellow really handicaps himself immeasurably in the struggle for success. Cheerfulness is to a boy what axle grease is to a wagon; it makes things smooth and enables you to get further and accomplish more with the same expenditure of effort and power.

It's the boy who can "endure hardness as a good soldier," in St. Paul's phrase, without whine or complaint, who wins, and there's another good phrase of St. Paul's that is worth recalling in this connection. "Forgetting those things which are behind," he says, "this you also do." In other words, he says, "I am not worrying about the past; it can't be helped. And I am not worrying about the hundred other things that might be done. But here is a thing that is worth while, and I buckle down to it."

I have known boys to worry about their mistakes until their worry became a ten times bigger mistake than anything else they had ever done. You ought to worry just enough over a mistake to make sure you don't make it again, and then forget it. And it is a good rule of Edward Everett Hale's: "Never bear more than one kind of trouble at a time. Some people bear three kinds—all they have had, all they now have, and all they expect to have."

$100 Reward, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarh. Hall's Catarh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the system strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

WHAT THE OTHER FELLOW'S GOING TO DO

In the first place, he's gone cotton crazy. 12-cent cotton has been too much for him; it has gone to his head and, displacing the little bit of reason knocked into it by six-cent cotton last year, has set him planning air-castles already.

Even now he is visioning cotton on every possible acre, cotton in the fence corners, cotton along the roadside up to its very edge, little or no oats, little or no corn—cotton, cotton, everywhere, with what he regards as the certainty of good prices, with consequent affluence. He has already figured it out that the rest of the world will diversify, leaving the raising of cotton to him, and he's fully resolved to "make a killing."

He has some feed now that hard times made him raise, but he doesn't care whether he has any this year or not, for won't it be easy for him to buy all he wants with his big crop of cotton? He planted peas in his corn last year, but didn't save any seed, so won't plant any this year. What's the use, he says, when you can buy plenty of commercial fertilizer on credit? He terraced some of his land and saved the barn yard manure last year; but what's the use, he says, of keeping up these things when a fellow's going to get rich this year raising cotton, anyway? He had actually learned a few common sense economies and had apparently taken a few steps toward getting himself on a rational level, live-at-home basis, but pshaw! What's the use of a fellow doing such things when cotton's twelve cents?

If this "other fellow" lives in your neighborhood, it will be interesting to watch him. He's going to "make a killing," all right, but it will not be the kind he's looking for.—Progressive Farmer.

EGGSACTLY.

That's a good one about the Kansas City man who called for the fifth nocturne on the pianola at breakfast time because the length of time required to play it was just right for boiling an egg. The "bes ever" egg yam, however, was recently sprung by Bert Leston Taylor in his column in the Chicago Tribune. He says a Chicago mother wrote a teacher a letter explaining her daughter's absence from school, as follows:

"Please excuse my child. She had a tooth egg, a head egg, and a ear egg she was laying all the time in bed."

And here's another one of Taylor's "not so bad's":
"Referring to the father of Samuel Taylor Coleridge, the Dictionary of National Biography says: 'Many anecdotes are told of his absent-mindedness. He was twice married, having three children by his first wife and ten by his second.'"

A NEW COLORED ONE.

Brudner Ham preached an especially brilliant and effective sermon, and a couple of unknown lady visitors, came up to the "pulpit" after services to congratulate him. One of them asked the parson his name, to which he facetiously replied, "My name is the best part of the hog," to which one of the congratulating sisters replied: "You shore preached the best sermon I ever heard, brother Chittlins."

Discouraging

His dog was a fierce Airedale which could whip and had whipped every other dog in the neighborhood. Then he clipped his coat.
"Yes," he said to a friend, "the clipping was my own idea. I believe it made him look better, but it was very awkward for the dog."

"How was that," queried a friend.
"Oh, the other dogs didn't know him. He had to fight them all over again."—T. P. A. Magazine.

WEAK, AILING CHILD

Made Strong By Delicious Vinol
Lakeport, N. H.—"Our little girl 8 years of age was in a debilitated, run-down condition and had a stubborn cough so she was weak and ailing all the time. Nothing helped her until we tried Vinol. Then her appetite increased and she is strong and well, and I wish other parents of weak, delicate children would try Vinol."—Geo. A. COLLINS.

This is because Vinol contains the tissue building, strengthening cod liver elements and the tonic iron which a weak and run-down system needs.

IN THE LONG RUN.

Mayor Thompson of Chicago, was talking at a dinner about the monstrous strides parades for and against Sunday closing that have been thrilling the windy city.

"The Sunday closing law is now being enforced by us," he said. "But can we keep it up? We have the advantage, but to make our advantage permanent we must work very hard. Otherwise our opponents will be in the position of the bachelor at the Christmas ball—down and out at first, but victorious in the long run."

That bachelor, tall and lean and distinguished looking, approached a care worn fat man and held out his hand.

"Hello, Smith," he said cordially. "How glad I am to see you. It's seven years since—"

"But Smith frowned and said in a worried, cold voice: "Beg pardon. You have the advantage of me."

"Yes, I know I have," said the stranger. "That's why I am so pleased. We were rivals for Minnie Madden's hand—don't you remember?"—and she rejected me and married you."
